Spanish Army Seeks to Alter Franco Rule

Role of Opus Dei Seen as the Target

By Anatole Shub and Miguel Acoca

MADRID, Dec. 20 (WP) .- In the past seven dars, a dramatic series of off-stage confrontations and skillfully orchestrated public dem-onstrations has brought Spain to the brink of a possible military coup d'état.

While the position of Generalis-simo Francisco Franco, 78, is not in eopardy, hard-line army officers are attempting to force radical changes in the policies and personnel of the government. At stake are the future of the moderate Opus Dei group of technocrats, and their policies of economic modernization, political relaxation and "Europeanization" of Spain.

The Opus Dei, which has exert-ed increasing influence within Spanish governments since 1957, appeared to have gained a dominant position last year in the power struggle for Gen. Franco's Trial of Bascues Apparently impregnable only two onths ago, Opus Del's position has been swiftly undermined as a result of the controversial trial of Basque nationalists by a military ribunal in Burgos. Using Gen. Franco himself last week to enhance the legitimacy of their campaign, the army hardliners have combined the traditions of 19th century Spanish military "law and order" pronunciamentos with more up-to-date techniques of mass manipulation.

U.S. Makers Of Detergents To Drop NTA

Baby-Deforming Effect Feared

By Victor Cohn

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (WP) .-Under U.S. government pressure, detergent makers agreed Friday to stop using the chemical NTA, which is believed to cause birth defects in animals. NTA was a substitute for phosphates widely criticized in three countries for polluting water.

The government's fear, Surgeon General Jesse Steinfeld said, is that pregnant women may drink water from public supplies contaminated with NTA from detergents and interlocked with molecules of dangerous metals like cadmium and mercury.

Then these prospective mothers, like the mice and rate in federal tests, might produce deformed in-

"There is no evidence at this time to indicate anyone has been or is being harmed" by the combination of NTA with metals in the environment, Mr. Steinfeld added. Guided by Prudence

But "prudence," he said-and the iact that NTA use was scheduled greatly to increase—dictates NTA's abandonment "pending further tests."

The detergent-makers had begun using NTA (nitrilotriacetic acid) as a replacement for phosphates in their products several months ago, after phosphates were said to pro mote water pollution.

Meny of the firms have invested heavily in NTA as a substitute Three chemical firms alone Ethy Corporation, W. R. Grace and Monanto-have committed themselve to produce more than 500 million pounds of NTA by 1972.

In August, Canada banned manu Some Canadian officials urged a switch to NTA. In Sweden, too. there was wide abandonment o phosphates and a turn to NTA.

Fog, Slowdown Cut Service at

London Airport LONDON, Dec. 20 (Reuters). -Weather conditions and labor disputes combined to cause delays of up to seven hours on some air services at London Airport today.

Five transatlantic flights left well after their scheduled de-parture time because of the late arrival of their incoming aircraft, while other flights were affected by an overtime ban and work-to-rule tactics by ground crews.

Even worse hit than passenger aircraft were mail and cargo flights. Some, which were due to have taken off during the night, were still grounded late today, many of them with Christmas mail aboard.

Why 300,000 GIs Remain in Europe

Mr. Golb and Mr. Halperin are former Defense Department officials who have worked on foreign policy in the Johnson and Nizon administrations. They wrote this erticle for The Washington Post.

By Leslie H. Gelb and Morton H. Halperin

WASHINGTON. Dec. 20 (WP).-One of the major foreign policy debates in the next Congress will be about American troops in Europe. Should the United States reduce its NATO forces in Western Europe and Berlin? If so, hy how much? Under what conditions? When? With what ex-

In this article, we seek to explain why even those who favor a retrenchment in the American role in the world and reductions in defense spending should not now seek to withdraw American forces from Europe. Because West Germany is now seeking to nor-malize its relations with the Sovict Union and Eastern Europe and because the Soviet Union and the United States are now in a constellation of strategic nuclear parity, this is precisely the wrong time to dis-card the old NATO cliches.

These questions are not new. They have been asked for the last four years, but the Executive Branch has not been pressured to answer them, Now. it appears, the lines are being drawn and answers will have to be forthcoming.

Power as a Lever

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, supported by a bipartisan majority of his senatorial colleagues. has introduced a sense of the Senate resolution calling for "substantlai reductions" in U. S. troops in Europe. This group has not brought its views to a vote. preferring instead to use its potential power as a lever to get the President to act.

The response came a few weeks ago, but it was not what the senators wanted. On Nov. 30, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird sald that the United States would make no "force capability reduction until at least July, 1972," On Dec. 2. the NATO defense ministers declared the necessity to maintain the present 300,000-man level of U. S. forces and announced a new five-year, $1 hillion program to improve bases, forces and weapons with no cost to the United States. On Dec. 3. President Nixon issued a statement that be would "not reduce (U.S. forces: unless there is reciprocal action from our adversaries.

Mr. Mansfield greeted these rejections with a more formidahle challenge than before. He said he would go heyond his sense of the Senate resolution. which would not have the force of law, and would now seek to amend the Defense appropriations bill and legislate the troop reductions.

Cold War Cliches

The arguments for United States troop reductions in Europe have to do with costs. burden-sharing and the general desire for retrenchment in the U.S. world role. The arguments against reductions read like a of Cold War cliches: "negotiate from strength," "the need for a flexible and controlled-response military capability and strategy" and "the cohesion of the alliance." Yet these cli-ches may have more validity today than ever hefore.

The advocates of U.S. troop reductions in Europe advance four points: first, that bringing men home from Europe will save hudget dollars. This point is, in short, false.

It would probably cost more to maintain these same forces in the United States than in Europe. If equipment had to be prepositioned and air and sea lift capablity purchased in order to return these forces to Europe on short notice, the budget costs would be greater than if the forces were kept in Europe. The only way to save money is by disbanding the

Less Useful Items

This decision cannot be separated from the larger issue of the overall size and character of the Defense budget and the more specific question of the number of divisions and tactical air units we should maintain.

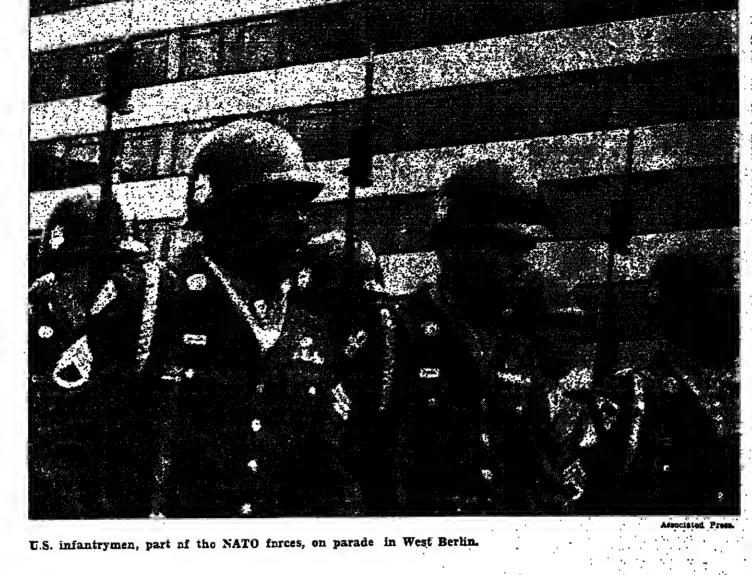

In this regard, it would seem that there are much less useful items to cut than credible ground combat forces, and that wbatever reductions we do make should come from forces for non-European contingencles.

The second argument is that the return of U.S. troops will help our balance of payments. If the balance of payments with our NATO allies is looked at solely in terms of military and related expenditures, the cost to the United States is about $900 million. Wa spend about $1.5 billion in NATO Europe and our ailies purchase about $600 million in the United States. This is an inequity, and cost-sharing plans can be developed to minimize it.

The main point is, however, that balance of payments costs do not really measure a nation's contribution and responsibility to the alliance. Foreign military expenditures are at once only a part of the international finance system and a part of the overall economic relationship among the NATO allies.

Measured in this broader context, the United States henefits more than it is disadvantaged. The United States is the banker. Wo run a large trade surplus. Our investments in Europe are. to put it gently, extensive. This is by way of saying that we are in no way harmed by our balance of payments deficit and tbat the halance of payments issue is more a matter of domestic politics in the United States and Europe than of economic concern or alliance hurdensharing.

Third, it is said, our European allies should do more for the common defense, and U.S. troop withdrawals would either compel them to do more or demonstrate that they are not worried about the Soviet threat. But if they are less concerned about the Soviet threat than we, we still will want to maintain the option of a conventional defense of Western Europe. We still need sizahie ground forces to maintain the credibility of the U.S. overall deterrent. Of course, we want our European partners to do more, but we have our own interests to consider.

The fourth argument is that the United States should adopt a lower profile throughout the world, and this means cutting forces in Europe as well as elsewhere. This is a matter of pri-Western Europe and Japan are the only areas of strategic importance in themselves to the United States. Retrenchment is in order for the 1970s, but it should come to NATO last.

Thus far we have been demonstrating that the gains from withdrawal are likely to he much smaller than expected and that the problems of budget priorities and International monetary policy can he dealt with without withdrawing substantial American forces from Europe We turn now to the benefits that we believe could result from maintaining our forces in

Our fundamental purpose in Europe is to avoid war, whether arising from Soviet expansionlsm and miscalculation or German revanchement. We also do not want Western Europe to close Itself off from American trade, travel or influence. Each of these objectives depends on satisfactory internal developments in West Germany.

Americans have come dangerously close to taking democracy and stability in Germany for granted. Although there appear to be solid grounds for optimism. we would argue that high priority must continue to be given to maintaining the corditions under which German political leaders compete for power without promising to change the status quo by force or by dangerous concessions to the Soviet Union, or promising to turn the European community into an anti-American alliance.

It is in this context that Chancellor Willy Brandt's Ostpolitik should he analyzed, rather than in the context of Cold War confrontation which appears to characterize the administration's approach. Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson emerged from a recent meeting with President Nixon to express concern about current West German policy. Although administration officials on the record deny any such fears, the German press continues to re-flect the view that the United States has arged caution. High administration officials are re-ported to believe that all of the concessions have come from West Germany in the form of formal acceptance of the status

Misses the Point

This approach seems to miss the point. It is in our interest as well as that of the Soviet Union and all other nations of Europe) to have the Federal Republic formally accept the status quo provided it does so freely and not because her lead-ers fear that the United States is about to abandon Europe.

Thus far, Mr. Brandt's moves seem to be based on what is good for Germany. He believes that the future health of German security depends on clearing away the myths of the "temporary" division of Germany and loss of territory to Poland and on beginning a reconciliation with Eastern Europe. But Mr. Brandt believes that such steps are safe only because they are rooted in conagainst the Soviet Union and in German participation in a united Western Europe.

It is here that the issue of American troop levels is imnortant Any significant force cen troop withdrawals would reduction now would be viewed undoubtedly force reappraisal of by Germans as merely a prelude to substantial withdrawals. We this policy. could protest to the contrary, German support for our efbut it would be unlikely to be forts at SALT would also be jeopardized by substantial troop withdrawals, which would refocus attention on the strategic halance. To the extent that SALT confirms Soviet-American strategic nuclear parity; conventional forces increase in importance.

Europe and America stand on the brink of a trade war which would be disastrous for both. Although trade war economic problems must be dealt with on their own terms, there is no doubt that a substantial U.S. withdrawal would exacerbate the situation.

Finally, we should not ignore the importance of American forces to the conventional bal-ance in Europe, NATO and Warsaw Pact forces are now essentially in balance; no Soviet military leader could promise the tary confrontation, Substantial American withdrawals . would after the balance: .

Running the Risks

However, in a few years it should be possible to make a change without suffering the costs or running the risks of moving now. It is not overly optimistic to hope for a significant change in the European scene over the next several years: German relations with all of the countries of Eastern Europe: German ratification of the treatles with the Soviet Union and Poland and of the NPT; an agreement on Berlin: a SALT agreement; a European security conference.

After Europe has adjusted to these changes, variations in the number of American troops in Europe will be much less important. Agreement batween N .TO and the Warsaw Pact countries on mutual and balanced force reductions may then be possible, although the technical difficulties of negotiating such an agreement will remain great. More likely, both sides will reduce untlaterally.

"Negotiating from strength" was for many years an excuse for building up military forces and not negotiating. At long last the Germans are beginning to negotiate. Our interest lies in supporting that effort both diplomatically and by maintaining the military strength that will enable them to proceed in a way that both we and they will find acceptable.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 20 .-President Nixon appears to be in for a hard fight for re-election in 1972-especially if economic conditions have not improved by that time and the Vietnam issue remains unresolv-

Most radicals are not following the Weathermen, Mr. Ov-shinsky added, but once a bomber is caught and charged with conspiracy, radicals and other youths will support him. "They identify," he explained. "You show support for victims of oppression. They become heroes because they fought the law. Many would harbor Bernardine Dohrn or Angela Davis." Miss Dohrn is a Weatherman leader who is on the FBI's "most-wanted" list. What they're really saying is that you can't organize a mass movement in the United States for a revolution so they're resorting to terrorism. It's dangerous for the whole radical movement, because the reaction of the average American is that all radicals are bombers."

Indifference Best

Sitting at the counter im Johnny's Restaurant near Wayne State University in Detroit, Bruce Hern, 18, a freshman, said:

"I just don't like what both sides are doing-the Weathermen or the government. I guess being indifferent is the hest way. I myself can't suzgest any ideas on how to solve things. Everyone should mind his own business. That would be the best way if it was pos-

And Herman Bates, a Westchester, N. Y., conservative who worked in Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign in 1964, declared of the bombings: "People don't like them. But they're not outraged. They're just annoyed."

Most persons who have studied radical groups agree that political bombings are the desperate acts of a weakened movement that has not attracted a mass following.

.One reason for the bombers' failure to win many followers is that most radicals, college students and other segments of the youth culture are steeped in the nonviolent traditions of the civil rights and peace move-

They sincerely deplore the possibility of killing or maining innocent persons. And while many sympathize with the frustrations and the goals of the extremists and would willingly shelter them from the police, they consider their tacties "adventuristic" and "counter-productive," inviting unwanted repression and scaring away potential supporters.

Moreover, the bombings have brought, no beavy repression that would sharply polarize the

The federal government and some states have tightened up their laws on the sale, use and transportation of explosives. The FBI has stepped up its ef-forts to find suspected hombers. The police departments of many cities have increased the size of their bomb squads, partly because of the soaring number of threats that must be checked out, But there have been no mass arrects and the public bas Wh. no appenie for hunts.

Still the bombings go on with what most experts agree is a. rapidly increasing frequency and intensity in the last few years. A lack of national records, except for recent months, makes comparisons almost impossible with earlier periods when violence - swept the country and bombings were in vogue. However, the bomb section of the New York Police Department has kept thorough records for a number of years. These present a startling picture of the rise in incidence. In 1961, the section handled 722 cases: in 1965, it had 1,011 cases; in 1969, cases rose to 3,192. As of the second week of November of this year, they totaled 8.745.

In bomb squad parlance, every duty members are called upon to perform is a "case." This ranges from checking out anonymous false telephoned threats to defusing bombs and incendiary devices to searching a building that a dignitary is to visit.

Almost anyone, in government or out, who speaks of bombings these days is talking or think-ing about the Weathermen or other radical leftists. This is partly because they have sought publicity, partly because their targets have been military, po-lice, government or industrial establishments and partly because the FBI has placed several militants on its "most-wanted"

However, they have laid claim to relatively few of the total number of bombings and a careful perusal of any of the various lists of explosions in the nation would indicate that there are a great many other types of bombers abroad in the land. In fact, the experts say that bombers are a diverse group. embracing the radical left, the radical right, black militants, racketeers, persons involved in labor disputes, immigrants, sucb as Cubans, who have a griev-ance against the present gov-ernment in their homeland, and the mentally ill who have a grudge against society. Still, there is little doubt that disenchanted young leftists have contributed significantly to the bombing totals.

A Justice Department official in Washington, admittedly guessing, put the number of Weathermen at fewer than 500. These, he noted with some chagrin, are scattered around the nation in groups of three or four, making infiltration by informers or the FBI almost im-

The young radicals are anything but structured and most law enforcement officials do not see their hombings as a national conspiracy in any but the loosest sense—small groups with similar aims spread across

Hard to Identify

Are they Weathermen? Or freelance radicals? Or youngsters out for excitement? What is a Weatherman? Anyone who says he is? There are no cards to carry, dues to pay. Any person or group can choose a romantic name from the youth culture and expound some revolutionary ideals.

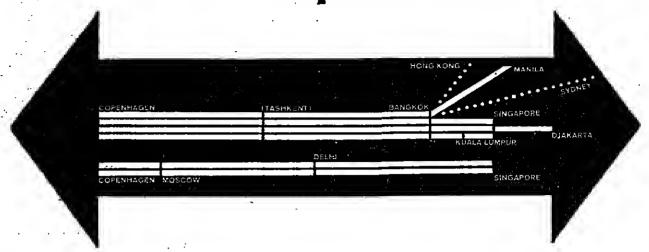

Instructions for making bombs and carrying on guerrilla warfare are easily available from the underground press, libraries or from any number of radical groups that insist that they do not take part in such actions

A young woman social worker in Columbus, Ohio, who was active .. in demonstrations last spring at Ohio State University, explained the attraction for at least some of the bombers.

"There's a crisis in the movement," she said. "Things have split apart and many people are tired. There's a lot of attraction when a few people can blow up a building and do millions of dollars in damage and the news media carry [it] all over the country. Then the people can slip underground, look at each other and say, Ha,

"There is a romantic thing about it. You can be the revolu-tionary for a day but not really get involved. Like you and your girl going around blowing up bridges. It gives you a feeling that you're doing something."

The Legislative Log-Jam

The people of the Unitad States in Congress assembled are in a fine parliamentary mess. There are senators opposing the supersonic transport plane who voted for cloture of debate on the SST because they oppose filibusters, and senators who want the SST but voted to permit a filibuster against it because they may want to filibuster themselves some day, The President is cracking the whip; some senators resent that. And others resent the House of Representatives. Meanwhile, needed and useful legislation is stalled, while the leaves of the calendar filto remorselessiv closer to unavoldable adjournment.

There is enough blame in this situation to go around. The House has been efficient, but perhaps too much impressed with that efficiency. The Senate has been confused and over-sensitive about its dignity, which, under the circumstances. has become minimal. The administration wasted its prestige in fighting for conservative Supreme Court justices and compounded the error by trying to purge its senatorial critics during the recent campaign. And above all, the SST has taken on a kind of apocalyptic menace in the minds of its opponents that has made it a focal point for all the discontents of the waning congressional session.

There are grave doubts, and valid doubts, about the usefniness of this megatherium of the airlanes. And there are equally valid arguments, in terms of the short-term and long-term health of the American aircraft industry, for pushing it at least to the prototype stage. The present compromise. worked out by representatives of the House and of the Senate, will not cause the world to disintegrate in one massiva sonic hoom. But it will ease the serious problems confronting the American aero-space industry. and keep the United States in a bargaining position, if the world should decide eventually that SSTs are suitable for long-range commercial aviation.

There is, perhaps, a disturbing analogy with the development of the big battleship, which reached its peak in the Japanese Musashi and Yamato, and now has left only relica to roost quietly in mothballs. Alfred T. Mahan, the great exponent of sea-power, hellaved that there was an nptlmum size for battleships, which had been reached about the turn of the century. But his advice was ignored; along came the dreadnought, and the super-dreadnoughts that followed, and the ahips got bigger and more heavily gunned, defying all attempts to curo their growth by treaty, until the plane, the submarine and-above all-the atomic of the year is that they are not bomb made them obsolete for the decisive role they once played.

The analogy is far from perfect, of course, There are ways, if the further growth in or menacing, but clearly there has size and speed of commercial planes is manifestly uneconomic or dangerous, to check competition. But a filibuster in the Senate at the cost of sacrificing more important legislation is not the best of these ways. In fact, in the present context, it is a bad way.

Vietnam Opening in Paris?

After two months of negativism, the Vietmamese Communists now have made a first eautious response to President Nixon's imaginative October offer to negotiate a standstill cease-fire, a political settlement and a timetable for American withdrawal. Their response, outlined at the last two sesslons of the Paris peace talks, indicates several significant advances from previous positions. It warrants far more vigorous American probing than it appears to be receiving.

One advance is that North Vietnam's delegate. Xuan Thuy, is no longer insisting that the United States agree to complete withdrawal of its troops by June 30, 1971, as a pre-condition to negotiation of a settlement. He acknowledged last week for the first dime that Washington would not accep preconditions. Instead, he indicated a willingness to discuss a deadline for American withdrawal and invited the United States to propose one that is "logical and reason-

Another shift, of uncertain significance, is in the Dec. 10 Viet Cong offer to effectuate a "cease-fire"—a word they have been chary of nsing in the past-with American forces "immediately after" the United States announces the agreed withdrawal date. Heretofore, the Communists have insisted that a political settlement must precede a "ceasefire," although they have said they would not attack American forces as they leave.

Finally, there have been two elliptical bints that international supervision might be accepted for the cease-fire and elections, es well as withdrawal of external forces.

The new Communist proposals resolve none of the important substantive issues that stand in the way of a settlement, such as tacit North Vietnamese withdrawal, the division of power among the major South Vietnamese factions and the nature of international supervision. Captured documents indicate that Hanoi warned its Southern cadres in advance that the proposals did not mean a cease-fire was imminent, and that hard fighting still lay ahead.

The Communists continue to insist, as heretofore, on forming a provisional coalition government with a new Saigon regime that excludes President Thieu, Vice-President Ky and Premier Khiem. But there is a hint that this issue can be taken up later and is no longer a pre-condition for negotiation of a cease-fire and withdrawal date for merican forces.

a standstill cease-fire first, followed by maritime activities along the south-American withdrawal on an agreed timetable. The Communist proposal appears to nobody here even grants that this be the converse of that: It proposes that a should or could be a source of cease-fire go into effect "immediately after" agreement is reached on a deadline for American withdrawal,

But the complex conditions of an extended cease-fire would have to be negotiated in advance. Does this mean the Commonists are prepared to negotiate simultaneously on the conditions of a casse-fire and the deadline for American withdrawal? If so, a way to initiate substantive private negotiatiations between the United States and North Vietnam may now exist for the first

Cambodia's War

The going is getting tough for the twomonth-old Republic of Cambodia. Washington is clearly concerned at the way things are shaping. Mr. Rogers has reaffirmed that American ground troops will not be committed. But the arrival of the dry season has sharpened the fighting, eased the supply problems of the Communist forces. and increased the pressure on Gen. Lon Noi's government. Cambodian republican zeal is not wearing out, but it is becoming a little battered.

For the present, all that the United States can do is to send in aid and hope Lon Noi does not fail. The indications are that he will not. But the best he can do is to improve his military position and to reestablish Phnom Penh's connections with the rest of the country. A prolonged state of war is the prospect.

An American Veto

America has vetoed the sale of big computers to Russia by the British firm, International Computers, Ltd. What is intolerable

If that lesson is learned we will profit from our loss.

The official attitude here toward Washington is now hard and critical. It is not hostile been a marked change for the worse since the first of the year. The most ohvious changes are that Leonid I. Brezhnev is now the central figure in the regime, and that Soviet officials are now openly and uniformly critical of President Nixon's conduct of American foreign policy. Western diplomats in this capital do not blame the criticism of the President on the rise of Brezhnev. nor do they believe that Brezhnev has yet acquired the dominant position held by Khrushchev in the sixtles, but they believe he has emerged above Kosygin as the

Its central theme, putting the point mildly, is that

Nixon "is not a reliable man," but a politician who talks about wanting an "era of negotiation" but whose actions in North Vietnam, Cambodia, the Middle East and Cuba make serious negotiation very

Expansion Policy

It is, of course, quite "natural" in the Soviet mind that the U.S.R. President Nixon's proposal is to negotiate building program and expand its and into the Indian Ocean, and anxiety in the West.

Incidentally, in only one session did officials differ in their estimate of the decline in U.S.-Soviet relations. At the beginning of an official luncheon, two officials re-marked that Washington and Moscow were 'back in the Cold but were put down by a War." higher official, who said this was a wrong estimate. The Soviet gorernment, he insisted, was still looking for peaceful political settlements in the Middle East, the strategic arms talks in Helsinki,

Despite this semantical disagreement, they all agreed on the following points:

1. President Nixon constantly confronted them with preconditions on negotiations. He did not want to deal with the subject at hand, but was asking them to demonstrate their good faith by making concessions on some other problem. This "Kissinger doctrine of linkage," they said, was unaccentable.

2. Nixon seemed to believe in "the diplomacy of surprise," as if he were trying to demonstrate tn the Moscow government that he could act boldly and suddenly. But these quick moves into Cambodia, and verbal threats on American aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean, only convinced the Soviet government that it was hard to make agreements with such an

'undependable man." 3. Finally, since September, the President seemed to be leading an anti-Soviet propaganda campaign by blaming Moscow for building a submarine base in Cuba, which they said they were not doing, and for breaking an agreement about the missiles in Egypt, to which they were not a party. Why hadn't Kissinger-who seems to be the new devil in their mind-got in touch with Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador in Washington, before

A Fact to Face

This, then, is the official Soviet thesis, and the fact that it is being put forward with such passion is a fact that has to be recognized, even if you reject it as invalid, for the Soviet government is now drafting its new fiveyear plan after a year of delay and some suggestions of uncertainty, and it seems to be doing this on the basis of the above assumptions.

A visitor gets the impression bere that the Soviet government is reasonably well satisfied with the way things have gone for Moscow in the last year or so, that it has stabilized the situation on its Chinese frontier and on its west- cal sadists who volunteered for the ern frontiers, and is now convinc- SS and ran the machinery of ex-

At first glance that recipe looks very inviting. Hardly anybody in this country is going to oppose a policy which guarantees Southeast Asia at the mere cost of a few bombing strikes. And that is one ni the reasons the program for aid to Cambodia went through the Senate by the lopsided majority of 72-22 last week.

Weaknesses Detectable

But a closer look reveals that the exit through air power is full of weaknesses. For one thing, there is the attitude of the North Vietnamese themselves. "The Russians and Americans must choose: Either they want to maintain their quasi-monopoly at all costs and keep the Chinese at a distance, and for this purpose they must keep up the arms race; or else they can come to an understanding which will limit their defense costs and risk vis-a-vis each other, shutting their eyes to the Chinese factor; but then they must be prepared to see China play an increasing part in the strategic equation and one day upset their calculations."

Tatu believes the curious triangle of mutually suspicious powers tends to prevent major conflict but does nothing to encourage detente. In other words it produces neither war nor peace.

N.Y. Stock and Bond Markets Show a Decline Amid Uncertainty Over Direction of Economy

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (NYT). The stagnant U.S. economy is beginning to stir slightly again from the stimulus of increased automotive and steel production, but consumer buying remains sluggish as the Christmas buying season comes to a close. As a result, the ongoing debate about appropriate national economic policy con-

Strong confidence about the outlook continues to reign in Wall Street, but widespread concern exists elsewhere because of tha fear that business activity will not revive forcefully enough and soon enough to turn the tide of rising unemploy-timues to rage.

The rather bland character of recent economic data on industrial production, factory orders, unemployment, personal income and consumer spending has heightened the enthusiasm of government officials, businessmen and economists for a more expansionary fiscal and monetary policy. And the persistence of inflationary pressures has fanned interest in some form of "incomes policy" to bring wages and prices under better control

Statistics issued during the last few weeks on the economy's performance during November were rather disappointing, even after subtracting the serious effects of the General Motors strike that was in progress during most of the month. The most disturbing was the fur-ther drop (six-tenths of 1 percentl in industrial output, bringing the total decline since last July to 7.6 percent. Also upsetting were the rise in unemployment to 5.8 percent of the labor force, the 2 percent drop in factory orders, the slim gain of $2.5 billion in personal income, the 38 percent plunge in auto sales and the virtually unchanged level of over-all retail business during the month, The only upbeat report was the one that indicaled housing starts rose 7.8 per-

Moreover, despito considerable fanfare, the administra-tion could only take hollow comfort in the fact that the nation's gross product reached an annual rate of 01 trillion last week. All of the advance this year that put it at that lofty level was traceable to inflation. December, however, might turn out to be a much beiter month now that the General Motors strike has ended and make-up production in autos. steel and other auto-supply industries is heing stepped up. Much will depend on the pattern of eonsumer buying in the final days of the Christmas rush.

Word from Detroit indicated that the car makers, for the first time in many months, scheduled higher production last week than they did in the comparable period of 1968. Scheduled auto assemblies last week were due to rise 2.2 percent above the 1869 week and 17.2 percent shove the preceding week.

Meanwhile, steel operations were stepped up by 1.2 percent a week ago and the mills re-

IOS and Gramco Break Off Talks on Possible Merger

By Robert J. Cole

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 'NYT'.—Investors Overseas Services Ltd. and Gramco Management Ltd., the two leading offshore mutual fund organizations in the world, decided Friday night to break off merger talks.

The official announcement of the break was made Saturday in Genova following an IOS board meeting.

Chairman of Gramco International Keith Barish said in London that: "There's no deal and no association."

Gramco International, a Panamanian corporation, owns Gramco Management. Gramco Disappointed'

Pierre Salinger, deputy chairman of Gramco U.K., added that Gramco had entered into the discussions "in good faith." Ho said Gramco was "disappointed" that Robert L. Vesco, ehief exeeutive officer of International Controls Corp., and Robert E. Slater, IOS chief executivo officer—both IOS directors—were unable to produce what they represented they could produce.

Although Gramco officials would not comment on the role played in the merger talks by Bernard Cornfeld, IOS founder and now a director, sources close to IOS, reached in Geneva, said: "It was a tough fight but Bernie [Cornfeld] won by about 14 to S.

Among board members understood to have backed the merger plan were Mr. Vesco and Milton F. Miessner of ICC: Mr. Slater; Richard Pershing, president of Hale Brothers, a San Francisco (Cootinned Page 11, Col. 5)

ported incoming orders were up 25 percent in the week, indicat ing their best demand since early May, Some of the buying was a hedge against a steel strike or price increases next

Unless consumer buying perks up in the durable area, however, the upturn in auto and steel output may not be sustained very well. The reports from around the country so far on eonsumer activities have not been particularly inspiring, despite some optimistic asse ment from Washington. After a spectacular six-week rally in which bond prices rose sharply and yields declined precipitately, the bond market's vastly improved tons paled somewhat last week. Efforts to push the trend further ran into some stiff resistance from investors.

The reluctance reflected a normal market reaction at tha end of a pronounced move in the course of interest rates, but it also mirrored the belief in some quarters that a renewed business expansion next year will make it probable that the general price level in the economy will keep rising too fast.

If the economy does pick up some speed next year, professional portfolio managers are reasoning now, bond financing will remain heavy and investors with money available for putting to work will be able to command

A total of 813 stocks advanced for the week, while 828 declined and 153 closed unchanged. Volume aggregated 69.5 million shares, against 73.8 million the week before. The Dow-Jones industrial stock average declined 3.15 points to 822.77; the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased 0.04 to 90.22, and the Stock Exchange composite slipped 0.03 to 49.06.

Eurobonds

There remains a kind of "now you see it, now you don't" quality about the EMU, however. As trading opened last week, dealers were quoting the bonds in dollars or DM for the most part with irritations noticeable over the lack of prearrangement for the trading formula.

The dollar quotation at the end of the week was 102 bid, for example, and the DM, 101 bid. Part of the difference is simply the usual house-to-bouse differential on quotes. But part of it represents the relative costs of buying the currency with which to buy the bonds—dollars being relatively less ex-pensive these days.

The dollar quote becomes a bit embarrassing politically, as a basic idea of the EMU was to promote a viable alternative to the U.S. currency. On the other hand, the DM quote is the market's admission that West Germany is at the moment pulling the EEC's monetary weight.

For the investor, the DM quote is a trifle confusing as the 101 bid is sctually a percentage. Expressed in the cur-rency itself, the bid is 3.696.60 DM for each 1,000 EMU

But it is generally felt that a bit more experience with the units will quickly smooth out these "breaking-in" difficulties.

Stumbling Block

One major stumbling block, it was said, was a last-minute con-dition calling for IOS to lend Gramco $1 million, which would eventually enable IOS to gain control of Gramco.

"We are not about to let our company be taken over for $1 million," Mr. Salinger said.

Sources close to both sides said that the original merger idea was brought to Mr. Barish by the Wall Street investment banking concern of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, which was reported to have said that "IOS is in-terested."

Mr. Salinger said that Gram-co would "survive without this deal" but added that the failure to reach an accord was "not a good omen for the fund in-

South bid two diamonds, following the canapé style in which a promising five-card suit is often concealed until the next round of bidding. His subsequent bid of two spades therefore showed a five-card suit, and the rebid of diamonds on the next round completed the picture of the distribution.

The remaining enction con-sisted of a series of slam tries and the partnership settled in the reasonable contract of five diamonds. West led the club nine, and South succeeded in overcoming the problem of the bad trump division.

He won with the club ace in dummy, led to the spade ace, and ruffed a spade. He cashed the heart ace, and followed with a heart ruif, another spade ruif. and the diamond ace. ### A Seasonal Sampler

By Thomas Lask

IN spite of the mumbling and grumbling along Publishers Row, in spite of the Dow Jones averages (now a trifle better), in spite of ancestral voices prophesying doom, book stores this season are stuffed with the usual holiday cheer. The books are lusciously gotten up, often in color we would give a couple of wisdom teeth to see in nature, printed on weighted paper, and expensive enough to keep a man pleased with himself until the tax collector sends his billetdoux. The following sampling of books that have crossed the desk is designed only to jog the imagination, to indicate what is around and perhaps supply an hour or two of pleasant brows-ing. The order in which they appear is pure chance.

The World of Classical Athens. Edited by Giulio Gianelli (Putnam, $20; $17.50 until Jan. 1).— Daily life in Athens is the subject of these essays by a number of American and European scholars. It is e very practical, down-to-earth study that tells what the Athenians wore, what they ate and how they prepared it, how they cured the sick, educated the young, and how they lived in public and private. It makes the Athenian a fellow human being rather than a classic chatting with Socrates. The illustrations taken from remains, models and extent art works are surprisingly apposite and work together with the text to show that Athens was not only a golden moment of the past, but also an ordered society as intent on living as on making history.

Paris 1960. Masterworks of French Poster Art. Edited by Herman Schmidt (Putnam, $30; $27.50 until Jan. 1) —Evocative lithographs dating from the turn of the century that advertise everything from lighting fluid, magazines and cafes to playhouses, liqueurs and books. There is a boldness, an energy and a flair in the color and quick line that make these examples leap from the page. It is interesting that no matter what the subject of the adver-. tisement, the human figure is at the center Perhaps it is this that makes the series so vital.

War Without Heroes, By David Douglas Duncan (Harper and Row, $14.95).—The human figure is also at the center of these photographs of American men at war in Vietnam; in battle array, under fire, wounded, dead, lost, Although Mr. Dun-can's photographs are full of the feel of war, they are raised from the immediate horror to testify to man's suffering and comradeship. His book is the most appropriate volume of the

Capital Clock Rundown

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—The Commerce Department's famous population clock now has a companion in the new GNP clock that was installed the other day in the lobby of the department's building down near the Washington Monu-

The population clock renders up-to-the minute reports on how many of us there ere, while the GNP clock ticks off the second-by-second increase in our gross national product. Gross national product is a statistic which auggests a country's relative richness; the United States, according to the GNP clock, is very rich.)

At Commerce, e man walking into the lobby can tell at a glance precisely how many Americans there are and what their richness index is at that very moment. This may be the only building in Washington ln which a man can learn annthing whatsoever without first having to get red in the face, wait for six bours and persuede eight people that he is related to a congressman.

Clearly, the government is on to a good idea with its clock program. Let there he more clocks. Let there be clocks in every government lobby in town, from the White House to the Democratic National Committee.

The Democratic National Committee confronts us with a simpler clock problem than the White House, What else could possibly suit the national committee's lobby half so appropriately as a Herbert Hoover clock, clicking off up-to-the-seconn readings on the number of warnings Democrats have issued against Hoover since 1948, when the number hit one trillion.

A few other lobbles are equally easy to prescribe for. The State Department, for example, should ohviously have an idea clock, on which would be registered in seconds, minntes, hours. days, weeks, months, years and decades, the length of time required for a single idea to penetrate the department and arrive at top management on the seventh floor.

The lobby of the Federal Communications Commission, just as obviously requires a Lucy clock, ticking off second-bysecond the number of reruns that have appeared on television from the birth of wrestling to the present instant,

Pentagon! How many clocks is it entitled to in that vast labyrinthine lohby where a waiting boonseeker may run his hand under the sofa cushion and pull out a billion-dollar cost overrun that slipped forgotten from somebody's pocket weeks

A turned-corner clock would be de rigueur, of course, to notify the casual passer-through how many times the corner has been turned in Victnam un to the present moment. This would not be just an ordinary turned-corner clock, like the population clock, or the Herhert Hooover clock or the Lucy clock.

This, after all, would be a clock essential to the national security. It would have to be able to survive a thermonuclear first strike by an enemy power and strike back by telling us with complete accuracy how many times the corner has been turned since the thermonuclear holocaust. It would be budgeted et $3 billion, with a $600 million cost overrun. If work on other clocks must be delayed to give it top priority, ao be it.

The Atomic Energy Commis-Everybody knows wbat kind of clock belongs in that lobby. Let us not think about it. Let us think, instead, of the quiet musty lobby of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the agency which grants federal approval for the waye railroads are run, no matter how badly they are run. For the ICC's lobby, the solution is obvious: A grandfather'a clock.

The Federal Highway Administration is marvelously suited for a burial clock. This would give an up-to-the-second accounting of the number of square miles of America remaining to be covered with asphalt before the last worm is sealed in forever.

For the Republican National Committee's lobby, why not a gigantic Spiro Agnew wristwatch clock that would render an exact count of how many of the newly horn Americans listed on the Commerce Department's population clock would be raised according to Dr. Speck's "Bahy and Child Care."

The score-keeper clock would seem pointless in the lobby of the Capitol. No one, after ail, really wants an up-to-the-second accounting of how many things Congress has not done all day, or all session. The best idea would be a huge and exceedingly noisy alarm clock, set to go off every ten minutes. With this, a few committee chairmen might at least be kept awake.

A presidential commission will probably be needed to suggest a clock appropriate for the White House lobby, and no one would want to anticipate Its recommendation. A timid sugtion may be in order how ever. Why not a clock giving the up-to-the-moment score of presidential commissions whose findings the President has disagreed with?

Traces of Ancient Culture Discovered in Iran

By Robert Reinhold CAMBRIDGE, Mass. Dec. 20 INYTI.—American and Iranian archaeologists are gradually piecing together a picture of a previously unknown civilization in southeast Iran that probably flourished about 3,500 The civilization was uncovered by a team led by C.C. Lamberg-Karlovsky of Harvard in an ancient mound named Tepe Yahya, which was discovered in the remote and rugged Soghun Valley, about 60 miles inland from the Persian Gulf, in

The site lies equidistant from ancient Mesopotamia, 600 miles to the west in present-day Iraq. and the Indus Valley, 600 miles to the east in Pakistan, and anpears to establish trade links for the first time between these two civilizations.

The civilization, which apparently existed about 1,000 years earlier than organized settlements had been thought to exist in the area, is stimulating wide comment by archaeologists throughout the world.

Joint Expedition

There have been four seasons of digging at Tepe Yahya. The excavations are a joint endeavor of Harvard's Peabody Museum, the Iranian Archaeological Service and the American School of Prehistoric Research.

The chief find was an administrative building containing writing tablets recording financial transactions, seals, pottery and other artifacts. These ob-jects suggest that the settlement was on the verge of urbanization at about the same time that Mesopotamia and other cultures to the west were also organizing. The transition from nomadic village life to fully literate citylike culture is generally thought to have been completed by 2900 spread elsewhere. However, in an interview at Harvard, Dr. Lamherg-Karlovsky sald that the discovery suggested that urbanization was "multi-linear," originating si-to 2700 BC. In the past, many experts bave held that urbanization started in Mesopotamia and multaneously in widely separated areas.

The settlement at Tepe Yahya has been described as "proto-Elamite," meaning that it was an early version of a culture that developed into the Kingdom of Elam, hundreds of miles to the west on the Euphrates River at the bead of the Persian Gulf.

Tepe Yahya was found almost by accident as the Harvard team lumbered in Land Rovers through the roadless mountains southeastern Iran asking villagers for clues. Prof. Lamberg-Karlovsky said that he picked the area because it was directly between Mesopotamia and the Indus and, if there were early contacts between the cultures, this would have occurred along the route.

In fact, texts from 2,500 BC found in the area of Mesopo-tamia called Sumer speak of trade with three places called Dilmun, Magan and Meluhha. Dilmun has been identified as the Persian Gulf island of Bahrein, Meluhha as the Indus Valley and Magan as the north coast of the Persian Guif.

Dr. Lamberg-Karlovsky speculates that Tepe Yahya, which is not far from the coast, is Magan.

The archaeologists have begun to piece together a picture of the aettlement's way of life.

Sophisticated Culture It appears to have been a fairly sophisticated culture. The existence of a large mud-brick administrative building, apparently run by an important person who controlled the peasants and trade, is evidence of considerable organization. The area in which the people lived remains to be explored. Until then, it is not possible to guess the population reliably.

But the site appears to hava been a kind of trading center. Objects found in the administrative building have been linked to Mesopotamia and to a lesser degree the Indus. Valley. One of the rooms of the building was excavated to the floor and the material recovered included six clay tableta with writing on them, 84 blank tablets, storage jars, bowls and cylinder sealings for jars.

The writing on the tablets was cunefform, the same wedge-shaped characters discovered in the ruins of Susa, the capital of the Kingdom of The presence of the blank tablets nearby indicated that the writing was done at Tepe Yahya and not imported. Storage Documents

Prof. Lamberg-Karlovsky believes that the table may be storage documents for grain or perhaps bills of lading or warehouse receipts. Some of the symbols are numbers and the writing does not constitute true literature in that it did not record such things as religion and history.

The team also found more than two dozen jar sealings made in Susa as further evidence of communication with Another clue was the discovery of Tepe Yahya-manufactured eteatite pottery. Steatite is a soft, easily carved soapstone that was widely used in Mesopotamia even though it had no steatite mines. The team has found steatite bowls and etatues in various stages of manufacture in motifs characteristic of Mesopotamia.

Mine Discovered

This has led to speculation that Tepe Yahya was the main source of steatite found everywhere from the Indus to Mesopotamia, an idea bolstered hy the discovery of a steatite mine near the mound last summer.

The evidence for trade with the East is weaker. The main clue is some Indus-like ceramics. But much work has to be done to establish this link firmly. Scholars have long debated the possibility of communication between the Indua and the Mesopotamian civilizations.

Among the other members of the expedition were Gholsm Ali Shamlou of the Iran Archaeological Service, Dr. E. C. L. During-Caspers and Dr. Nagaraja Rao. Technical details are to be published soon in the Journal of Persian Studies and other publications.

As Concorde Flies Faster Boom Complaints Multiply

LONDON. Dec. 20 (AP).-The Concorde's sonic boom has echoed on Britain's west coast ten times this year. So far there are 578 complaints and 232 claims for damages.

Yeslerday Concorde-002, the British prototype, flew higher and faster than ever before.

In a test run over the North Sea, it reached an altitude of 54,000 feet and a speed of Mach 2.03-more than twice the speed of sound-or about 1.300 miles an hour.

The test was No. 29 in the current British series, which has been systematically increasing flight speed. Concorde-001, the French prototype, flew at Mach 2 for the first time on Dec. 12. The supersonic plane being tested by its French and British builders is similar to the supersonic transport proposed in the United States.

A commission of the British Ministry of Aviation and Supply grapples with claims ranging from the equivalent of 66 cents to $1,692. It turns down only a few.

"If a claim is genuine, there is no limit on the amount we will pay," sald a spokesman. "We have no special budget to meet the costs."

A farmer once got 66 cents for a pot of glue with which he put hack some wall tiles snaken loose when the droop-nosed Concorde roomed down 'Boom Alley" along Scotland. Wales and Cornwall. Another man asked $67.20 for a cracked ceiling. The claim is being processed.

A Welsh farmer reported that his cow, startled by the boom, had miscarriage. A Cornish woman said her elderly father was rendered "shuddering and speechless." A woman in St. Ives said her electric heater was toppled over.

"As long as the claimant puts forward a reasonable case and accurately pinpoints the time and place of the incident, he stands a good chance of having his claim met." the spokesman said. The government has paid $3,120 thus far.

Whatever the complaint, the commission acknowledges it, first by mail and, if it materializes into a claim or appears to justify examination, by the nearest or most easily available government employee. The commission operates roughly like an insurance company, without the network of claim agents.

The commission did not investigate the demand for tile glue.
